My curiosity was now fully aroused, and as Jeck would tell the story, of course I was obliged to listen; and, if you think that in reporting it I am acting unfairly, I'll story to proceed.

I'll stop at once.

"It was during my second year at Harvard," began Jack, knocking the ashes from his cigar. How long ago it seems—but, let me see, it's only eight years. Yes, it was during my sophomore year that I accepted Frank Wilson's invitation to spend the Eister holidays with him, He was awful good company, and I knew that I would be sure to put in a jolly week at his place. Resides, there was another very strong inducement.

Hastily buying a ticket, I tore functically after the already slowly moving train, and, owing to my length of limb, succeeded in boarding the last car.

"Panting, perspiring, but exultant, I went through each car, in every seat expecting to find the object of my haste.

"I had gone through oil but one when we entered the tunnel, and I was beginning to fear that after all perhaps she might not have taken this train, when, as I was standing by the door, the rays of sunlight which came in through the occasional openings in the tunnel revealed her to me, seated alone at no great distance should of me.

"'What do you mean!' she exclaimed in a tone of mingled indignation and fright. 'I cet go my hand; you have made a mistake!'
"I obeyed her, thinking that she was apery at my mode of address.

"I cleyed her, thinking that she was angry at my mode of Rudfress.
"I beg your pardon," I said, 'I should not have spoken to you as I did, but I was so rejoiced to find you that I did not remember where we are. Darling, moving a little nearer, 'will you marry me? You must know that I love you; I have done so for ages, ever since my freshman year.'

expression of not seeing me which she im-mediately assumed. As she would not look at me I had plenty of opportunity to observe her, and saw that she really did esemble Helen in many ways, notwithstanding she was both fairer and smaller.
"But my object was not to admire her, although I assure you, my inclination was; so, finding that there was no hope of obtaining a vehicle, I started on foot, fortunately getting a lift over the greater part of the way.

We were seated in luxurious arm-chairs before the cheerful open fire in Jack's and smoking-room, enjoying his excellent Havannas, when my host broke the silence which had lasted for several minutes with the surprising question, "Did I ever tell you where and how I proposed to my wife?"

I nodded a negative reply, well aware as I did so that he knew that he had not hold me, but had prefaced his tale with an interrogation according to his usual custom. "It's quite a long story," said Jack in a warning tone, remembering my aversion to lengthy yarns as told by any one but myself.

"Ah! but such a subject," I answered, settling myself more comfortably in my chair and drawing the box of Havanas conveniently near. "I's shall be delighted to hear about it, but what will Mrs. Taylor say to your telling me?" I added, knowing how the partner of my lot would feel on the subject.

"She has positively forbidden me ever to speak of it," he said, laughing. "And I have cbeyed her until now—with one to the partner of my lot would feel on the subject by the said, laughing. American. I have no concern is the ioligience of English thought and manners upon America and Americans, and the position and conduct of certain Americans who come over here and appear in English society. Touching the latter, nothing could be more ridiculous and offensive.

The more I see of England and the English the more I am persuaded of the irreconcilable difference between us and them, and the more odious seem to me the affection and imitation of Anglicism by the American, who, having set a glimpse of American, who, having got a glimpse of the nobility, would straightway get him-

"I was in love at that time with his consin, Helen Wilson, who I had ascertained would be of the party. I believe we used to write to each other. I know I used to spend the greater part of my time composing verses about her, many of which, however, I had not the courage to send.

"When I heard that she was to be at X — I was delighted. I determined to go to New York and see if we could not arrange to travel up together.

"When I arrived at that city I went directly to her house; but at the door I learned that she had just left for X — having decided to go a day sooner than she had expected.

"Can't you love me a little?" Inquired tenderly, trying to take her hand. But she snatched it away, and declined either to turn her head in my direction or to answer my question.

"As the train was making a tremendous noise, I thought that perhaps she couldn't understand me, so I repeated my words at the top of my lungs. She made some reply, but I didn't catch it.
